Commemorative Coinage Of Portugal

By D. M. BULLOWA
New York City

The commemorative coins of Portugal are not many in number, yet the few that have been issued are of attractive design and of considerable historical interest.

In 1898 a set of three denominations was released, marking the fourth centennial of the discovery of India by Vasco de Gama.

During the middle of the fifteenth century Portugal was fortunate in having a royal patron of navigation. This patron, Prince Henry, had a twofold purpose. First, to secure for Portuguese commerce a share of the Levant trade; and secondly, to carry on the Crusade. For the bettering of these two aims he established a naval training station, which was the first step in preparedness. Prince Henry did not live to see the fruits of his efforts, for it was not until about the turn of the century that Vasco da Gama rounded the Cape of Good Hope, and then was able to continue across the Indian Ocean to India. Da Gama landed in Calicut in May, 1498, and erected a pillar there to mark the discovery of his new sea route.

Four centuries later, in 1898, the King and Queen of Portugal are depicted upon the commemorative coinage, of the 200, 500 and 1000 reis values, issued in silver for the occasion. All three denominations are of the same design, showing upon the obverse the accolated busts to left of King Carlos I and Queen Amelia. The reverse shows the Cross of the Order of Christ, with four rosettes in the angles. Surrounding is the inscription: IN HOC SIGNO VINCES, meaning "In this sign shalt thou conquer." At the base the dates of the anniversary appear: 1498-1898. Around the outer border is the inscription: 4th CENTENNIAL OF THE DISCOVERY OF INDIA, followed by the value.

In 1910 two anniversaries were commemorated. These issues show upon the obverse the head to left of King Manuel II, who ascended the throne in 1908, following the assassination of the King and Queen shown upon the previous issue. King Manuel II was well known as a numismatist until his death a few years ago.

Issues of 1910—Centennial of Peninsular War.

The first commemorative coinage of this ruler was struck in the 500 and 1000 reis denominations. The reverse shows the crowned arms of Portugal, with a cannon and lion in the background. Above the crown are the commemorative dates: 1808-1814. Around the border the legend reads: CENTENNIAL OF THE PENINSULAR WAR.

Napoleon was very anxious in 1801, as First Consul of France, to break the long-standing friendship between Portugal and Great Britain. Portugal was a very good market for British goods, and Napoleon's Continental System was based on breaking Britain's commercial ties and permitting France alone to enjoy the trade benefits. Napoleon was able to tentatively arrange with the King of Spain about the intended division of Portugal, and in 1807 French troops crossed Spain into Portugal. In 1808 British troops under the man who later became the Duke of Wellington landed in Portugal, and with the cooperation of the vacillating Spanish engaged in the Peninsular War, which lasted until 1814. Three weeks after landing in Portugal the British were in possession of the kingdom. For the part which the British played in these campaigns there appears upon the coin a lion, symbolic of Britain.

The final coin issued by Portugal as a kingdom has the same obverse as the previous issue, but was struck only in the 500 reis denomination. The reverse shows a winged Victory holding a laurel wreath over a portrait bust upon a pedestal at the left. At the right the figure supports the crowned arms of Portugal. Surrounding, the inscription reads: COMMEMORATIVE COIN OF THE MARQUESS OF POMBAL, followed by the value.

The early life of Sebastian Jose de Carvalho gave little indication of his future power in Portuguese affairs in the second half of the eighteenth century. He was born in 1699, studied law, and served in the army. He married, settled down, and was commissioned to write certain biographical studies for the Government. Some years later he was made Ambassador to England, and subsequently to Austria. In 1749 he was recalled to take up the post of Secretary for Foreign Affairs and War. His appointment was ratified in 1750, and he entered office prepared to recognize the nations' army and navy, and the financial and educational systems, for which his previous experience admirably fitted him. He encouraged the development of Brazil and Macao as well as native industries. In 1755 the dreadful earthquake at Lisbon occurred, but Carvalho's administrative powers were equal to the calamity, and his action at the time was speedy, direct and able. In 1770 he was made Marquess of Pombal. His administration, though capable, was very severe, and he had made many enemies. Following the death of the King, Pombal was dismissed from office, in 1777. He died in 1782. The reason for issuing a coin in 1910 as a commemorative is not apparent, as there appears to be no relation between that year and any date in the Marquess's life.

All the commemorative coins issued by the Kingdom of Portugal were designed by Alves, and bear his signature on the obverse.

In 1910 there was a Portuguese revolution and the monarch was forced to abdicate. The revolution took place on October 5, 1910, and a 1 escudo commemorates this event. It shows a bust on the obverse above the commemorative date, and on the reverse is shown the arms of the republic, within a wreath, with a fasces in the background. At the base is the value. The escudo of the Republic was approximately the same size and of the same weight as the old 1000 reis. Although dated 1910, this issue was not coined until 1914.

In 1928 the final commemorative issue of Portugal, to date, was released. This issue was of the 10-escudo value, but of a reduced valuation in the amount of metal per escudo. The 10 escudo piece of 1928 is the same size and weight as the 500 reis issue of the kingdom. This issue was coined to commemorate the Battle of Ourique in 1139. The obverse shows a knight of the Crusade period, on horseback, holding his sword and shield. The inscription reads: COMMEMORATIVE OF THE BATTLE OF OURIQUE—1139. The reverse shows a crowned shield.

The Battle of Ourique, which was fought not far from Lisbon, resulted in the unification of Portugal under one King. Five Moorish chieftain kings were defeated at the battle during July, 1139, by Alfonso I, who became the first King of Portugal.

In this Portuguese issue another instance occurs of the difficulty in relating the date of the battle, 1139, to the year of the issue of the coinage, 1928.

PART 2

The reduction in the size of the coins in the year 1907 caused large issues of the peso, twenty-cent and ten-cent coins. The one-half-cent bronze piece was not issued after 1908 and was issued only at the Philadelphia Mint. The only coin of single date that is found with both mint marks, "M" for Manila and "S" for San Francisco, is the 1920 one-centavo piece. With this exception, pieces from 1920 to date bear the Manila mint mark.

As far as known, none of the San Francisco pieces were coined as proofs, but without doubt collectors may turn up semi-proofs which have been struck from polished planchets.

Herewith is submitted a table of the San Francisco coinages from 1903 to 1920. We are indebted to P. J. Haggerty, Superintendent, and J. C. Batt, Acting Superintendent of the San Francisco Mint, for these figures.

The Lives And Coinage Of Caracalla And Elagabalus

By LEWIS M. REAGAN
Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Roman Empire was ruled by a rather rapid succession of Emperors, some good, some bad, some indifferent, the majority being either bad or indifferent. It is my personal opinion that the two worst ones were Caracalla and Elagabalus. Their private lives were such as to place them near the bottom of the scale of human decency, but their coinage is of some interest to numismatists. It is because of the latter that our attention is first directed to the former.

Bassianus, the son of Septimus Severus and Julia Domna, was born in A. D. 188. He was afterward called Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, but is better known as Caracalla, a nickname which he obtained from wearing peculiar clothes.

At the age of 8 he was declared Caesar, and two years afterward was given the title of Augustus. He married Plautilla in A. D. 202, and treated her with inhuman cruelty. He went with his father on the British expedition, and, after trying to murder him, succeeded to the throne in A. D. 211, conjointly with his brother Geta, whom he killed the following year. An atrocious career followed until Macrinus, the Praetorian Prefect, caused the tyrant to be assassinated in A. D. 217, in the 30th year of his life.

Caracalla exceeded his father in cruelty without inheriting any of his virtues, and he had the faculty of adding the keenest insults to torture. He destroyed the whole of his brother's friends and adherents, together with their families, and would not permit the bodies of many of them to be buried.

Besides his cruelty he was the most intolerable oppressor of his subjects and no emperor ever employed more wicked means of raising money or squandered it more recklessly. By his extravagance he emptied, in one day, the treasury which his father had filled by innumerable murders and unjust confiscations over a period of 18 years.

He was not only ignorant and stupid but a despiser of literature and learned men.

He lived in constant fear of his life, and after his death it was discovered that he had purchased, at enormous cost, poison enough to kill all his subjects.

His one significant act of law of lasting importance was the declaration that all his subjects of the provinces were citizens of Rome, yet it is believed that the motive was to make it possible to collect inheritance taxes from all subjects, a tax formerly collected only from Roman citizens.

This, and the erection in Rome of some magnificent buildings, are the only actions deserving of praise in the whole of his detestable career.

After a short reign of Macrinus, followed by his son Diodumenianus, the notorious Elagabalus was proclaimed Emperor 218 A. D.

The name Elagabalus was likewise a nickname, the original name of this Number One scoundrel of the Roman Empire, being Varius Avilus Bassianus. His mother, Julia Soaemias, was a niece of Julia Domna.

After a short, inhuman reign he was put to death, together with his mother, in A. D. 222, at the age of 18 years.

The soldiers were incensed at his plotting the death of his cousin Alexander (afterwards the Emperor Severus Alexander), and having found him and Soaemias in a sewer where they had tried to hide, their heads were struck off and their bodies dragged through the streets, and the mangled trunk of the Emperor was thrown into a sewer with a weight tied to it so that it might never receive the rites of burial.

This monster had a great many names, among them being the following: Varius Avitus, Bassanius, Antoninus, Felix. He took the title Pater Patriae before he arrived at the age of manhood. Some writers designate him Coins of Emperor Caracalla.

Heliogabalus, as the priest of the sun, but others called him Elagabalus, from El Gabal, a Phoenician god. It is by this later name that he is best known to numismatists.

Elagabalus is known to have fought with great personal bravery in the decisive battle against Macrinus, but this is the only bright spot that can be traced in his career. He surpassed all of his predecessors in vice, folly, and extravagance. He placed his grandmother as a colleague between the consuls and established a Senate of women to settle fashions and fashionable ceremonies. He made consuls of the sons of slaves and assigned to great persons the basest employment. His carriage was drawn publicly by nude women. He commanded the business of the day to be despatched by night, and that of night by day. He permitted no other god to be worshipped in Rome except the Syrian block of stone called El Gabal, and to show his scorn of acknowledged deities he profaned their temples and married a vestal virgin. He put Senators to death so that he might seize their widows, and, notwithstanding his early years and brief career, besides having a large number of concubines, married no fewer than six wives, all of whom he gave the title of Augusta, and then divorced them. No children followed these irregularities.

Elagabalus went far beyond any of his predecessors in costly extravagance. Nothing appeared on his table but what was brought from distant places at vast expense. Tongues of nightingales, camels' heels, combs torn from living cocks, and parrots' heads were among his common dishes. When he was near the sea he would eat no fish or other sea food, but anywhere inland nothing but the rarest sea food could please him.

Though his clothes were richly bedecked with jewels and ornaments of gold and silver, they were never twice put on, nor would he keep a ring which had once been used. He squandered all kinds of property so profusely that nothing but the whole wealth of the Roman Empire could have supplied his wants, and this at a time when the estimated income of the Empire was about 70 million dollars annually.

He is said to have invited blind men and cripples to dinners and when the meal was half over he would cause bears, lions and leopards to be suddenly let loose among them. In one of his pranks he ordered 10,000 pounds of spiders; at another time he exhibited publicly 10,000 mice, 1,000 rats, 1,000 weasels and 1,000 skunks. Historians of his day considered him to be the worst ruler ever to sit on the throne of Rome, and there was great public rejoicing at the news of his death.

Large bronze and gold coins of Caracalla are of considerable rarity, as are also the small bronze to a slightly less extent. Denarii and middle bronze, together with the Greek, Colonial and Egyptian, are common and can be purchased at a very modest price. The Coins of Elagabalus are of similar rarity.

The coins of Caracalla and Elagabalus are not readily distinguished from each other by beginners, as the inscriptions are often the same or nearly the same and the heads are similar, though Elagabalus was the more handsome of the two. The name ANTONINUS PIUS with various prefixes and suffixes appears on most of the coins of both Emperors, but the nicknames Caracalla or Elagabalus do not appear on any of them.

The following rules may be helpful and will usually be sufficient to distinguish the coins of the two Emperors:

1. When the head is much bearded, or of a more advanced age, it cannot belong to Elagabalus, who died at the age of 18. The beard begins to be long in the TR. P. X of Caracalla. Elagabalus did not have a beard until the last year of his reign, and it was a small one.
2. The appellations PART. MAX., BRIT., or GERM. belong only to Caracalla.
3. Reverse inscriptions of VICTORIA PARTHICA, LUDI SOECULARES, ARCUS AUGG. belong only to Caracalla.
4. A bare head, or the name CAESAR alone, without Augustus, belongs solely to Caracalla, for Elagabalus received the titles of Caesar and Augustus at the same time. Coins inscribed PRINCEPS JUVENTUTIS belong to Caracalla.
5. Coins on which appear PONTIF. without MAX. belong to Caracalla, for at that time there were two Augusti, and by a rule which held until the time of Balbinus and Pupienus the Pontif Maximus was the higher in rank. There are coins of Caracalla on which he is called P. Max., but this is to be read Parthicus Maximus, not Pontifex Maximus.
6. If the consulship and tribunate are joined on a coin, the distinction is easily made. Caracalla was TR. P. V. and COS. I, while Elagabalus in T. R. P. V. was COS. IV. Coins which exceed the fifth tribunate are of Caracalla, for in his fifth, Elagabalus was killed.
7. Coins on the reverse of which appears a star belong to Elagabalus, that device never being found on coins of Caracalla or of those who held authority with him—Severus, Domna, Plautilla, Geta. It is frequent on the coins of Elagabalus, but is not seen before his third consulship. Authorities agree that by this star, SOL ELAGABALUS is indicated.
8. When the face is very boyish looking, the coin is doubtless that of Caracalla, for he was called Augustus before he was 14 years old.
9. When AVGG. occurs in the inscription on the reverse it belongs to Caracalla, for by it two Augusti are denoted. Caracalla reigned partly with Severus, partly with his brother Geta. Elagabalus had no Augustus or partner in the empire.

10. The inscription around the head is usually similar on coins of both emperors, but in only one case is it known to be exactly the same, namely, ANTONINVS PIVS FEL AVG, and this is more common on coins of Elagabalus. When it appears on a coin of Caracalla, one or more of the preceding rules will be sufficient to make the proper distinction.

Note—The material for this paper was taken largely from a privately printed catalog of Roman Coins, written by Rear Admiral William Henry Smyth, of the British Royal Navy. Born 1788, died 1809. The book was printed in 1834. An examination of a large number of coins and cuts in catalogs have shown no error in the above conclusions. I shall be glad to learn of any that exist or of any exceptions or additions which should be made in the rules.

Inscriptions on Coins of Caracalla:

- No. 1—M AVR ANTONINVS PIVS FELIX AVG.
- No. 2—M AVREL ANTONINVS PIVS AVG BRIT.
- No. 3—IMP CAE M AVR ANT AVG P TR P.
- No. 4—ANTONINVS PIVS AVG/PONT TR P VI COS.
- No. 5—ANTONINVS PIVS AVG GERM.
- No. 6—PIVS AVG BRIT.
- No. 7—ANTONINVS AVGVSTS. RECTOR ORBIS.

These inscriptions are typical of the coins of Caracalla and are not found on coins of Elagabalus.

Copper-Nickel For Minor Coins, U. S. And Foreign

By WILLIAM J. SCHULTZ
Cincinnati, Ohio

Dr. Lewis Feuchtwanger 101 years ago (1838) invented his then alleged new composition metal, an alloy of copper, zinc and nickel (now known as nickel-silver) for the fabrication of hard-metal coinage.

The United States Mint pioneered in this copper-nickel metal, through its metallurgists, who experimented at the behest of the Secretary of the Treasury over a long period of years to create a satisfactory alloyed metal that would meet the monetary requirements of the United States, namely, "a cent's worth of metal in a cent."

A satisfactory copper-nickel metal was finally produced that met all the requirements of the Government and as samples, for the inspection of the officials, approximately 50 half cents, dated 1856, were stamped from the half-cent dies. The metal was approved officially and the 1856 flying eagle cent was issued in the last month of that year.

By an Act of February 21, 1857, the mint was authorized to issue the copper-nickel flying eagle cent of 1857 and 1858. Weight 72 grains, composed of 88 per cent. copper and 12 per cent. nickel. Thereafter the mint was authorized to issue an Indian head cent each year from 1859 to 1864, of the same weight and alloy in copper-nickel.

By an Act of April 3, 1865, the mint was authorized to issue for general circulation a three-cent nickel coin. Weight 30 grains, composed of 75 per cent. copper and 25 per cent. nickel. To be issued for circulation from 1865 to 1889.

By an Act of May 16, 1866, the mint was authorized to issue a five-cent nickel coin. Weight 77.16 grains, composed of 75 per cent. copper and 25 per cent. nickel. These shield nickels were issued from 1866 to 1883.

Its physical characteristics are: Melting point 1440° centigrade, (2625° Fahrenheit); Brinall Hardness No. 85 (3000 kilograms), and density 8.85.

It is high in color with a high optical reflectivity of about 65 per cent; magnetic at ordinary temperatures, enabling it to be easily distinguished from white copper base alloys of nickel, which are not. It is malleable and readily worked under compression machinery.

The Government of Switzerland, in the year 1881, was the first to use a 99 per cent. nickel for its 20-rappen coins. The 5 and 10 rappen coins were of the same purity, but issued later. The shrewd Swiss knew that the magnetic characteristics of 99 per cent. nickel used for coinage had for an advantage the detecting of counterfeits by use of the common horseshoe magnet.

A modern alloy composed of 75 per cent. copper and 25 per cent. nickel is termed cupro-nickel metal and is employed as one of the commonly used nickel alloys for national subsidiary coinage. The 1938 Jefferson nickels were fabricated from cupro-nickel metal, as were the Morgan and buffalo-Indian.

The following countries have since issued new pure nickel coins: Italy, Ecuador, Hongkong, Euzkadi, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, Canada and Rumania.

Our modern metallurgists, employed by private corporations, have now scientifically overcome the myriad of former difficulties encountered by those employed in the U. S. Mint, in the art of alloying metals with nickel for coinage and other purposes.

Today governments need only specify the alloy (the more alloy the cheaper the metal) mixed with nickel for their particular coinage desired and they may be furnished with the metal strips, with any style finish for obverse and reverse, ready for stamping out the planchets. Or the planchets of the proper dimensions can be furnished and the wastage of the strips remains with the mill.

Thus the mystery of securing proper alloys, mixed with nickel metal, has been solved and has completely vanished from that art.

If perchance you visit New York, for the Worlds Fair, call on R. E. Case, Develop and Research Dept., 67 Wall Street, and inspect the world's greatest collection of nickel coins extant.

My Collecting Experience

By D. C. WISMER
Hatfield, Pa.

An address at a recent meeting of the Philadelphia Coin Club.

About 1885 I heard of a farmer who had a number of large copper cents. His farm was located on the upper part of Wissahickon Creek, near North Wales, Pa. I went to see him. He had about 25 large copper cents. I offered him 5 cents each, and he accepted my offer. I took the cents home, placed them in a desk drawer and did not think about them for possibly a year or more. When I looked for them there were no copper cents to be found. I asked my good wife what had happened to them. She said she did not know, but that "the boys had been playing with them and evidently they had lost them." I do not remember any of the dates, all that had interested me was that they were large copper cents.

In 1889 I became acquainted with a man by the name of Jackson Croman who had some nice copper half cents, and Continental and Colonial currency. He was quite a collector and knew of The Numismatist, so I soon became a subscriber.

I commenced to hunt around the city of Philadelphia for coppers, etc., becoming acquainted with Mr. Mason, who had a small store on the corner of Filbert street and Penn Square; the Chapman brothers and their father; Dr. Maris, who made the most complete list of the New Jersey cents at the time; Mr. Idler, who had a jewelry store on South Eleventh street, and a Frenchman whose name, as near as I can recollect, was Bellerleau, who had a store on North Third street near Race street. From these dealers and the sales of the Chapmans I acquired most of my coins, also traveling around the country, in Allentown, Bethlehem, Easton and other places, buying such items as were for sale.

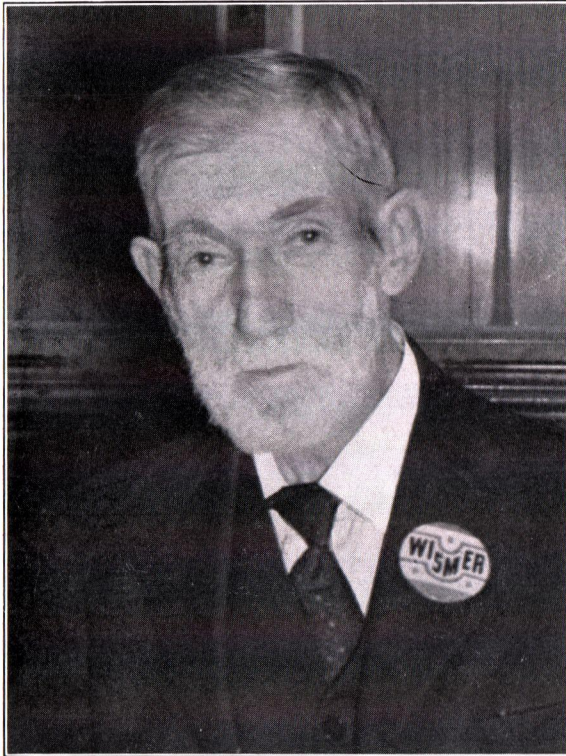

In Bethlehem I purchased about 1,200 large coppers from a shoemaker. In Quakertown, I bought 1,400 large copper cents from the executor of a man who had been toll-gate keeper on the Bethlehem Pike at Chestnut Hill, where he accumulated his large coppers. In Norristown was Gus Egolf, who gathered coins and had quite a collection. I purchased a collection of large copper cents from him that were fastened in recesses of a board surrounded with putty, which held them fast after it had become hardened, showing only the obverse. At the same time I bought two eagle cents of 1856, for which I paid him $4. I sold one later that had seen considerable wear for $3. The other one was uncirculated and still is in my collection and does not seem to be depreciating in value.

About 1895 I bought about 3,600 Civil War tokens and store cards. That made me a collector of that type of interesting necessity money. Upon finding quite a variety of die types of "Dix" tokens, I commenced to try to get all the varieties together. In order to get all the die types I bought one lot of "Dix" of 2,000 and found 19 varieties. Some years ago Dr. Hetrich accumulated the largest collection of Civil War tokens and store cards. He catalogued them in connection with Mr. Gutttag, of New York, and published it in an interleaved book, listing about 6,000 varieties. He traveled all over Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and the New England States to see different collections and buy varieties he needed. Just before his demise, three days, in fact, he visited me and showed me a variety of the "Dix" token that I did not have listed in my booklet, entitled "Varieties of Dix Tokens, 1863." Last year I obtained that very much wanted "Dix" token from Mr. Iannarella for ten cents.

From 1892 to 1896 there was general stagnation in business and many failures. Coxey started his march on Washington and was placed in jail for walking on the grass. Bryan started his free-silver campaign to have the Government coin everyone's silver into dollars, free of charge, so as to increase business and some other forgotten schemes. But Coxey is still on the job trying to get the Government to issue non-interest-bearing bonds, etc. However, no one was endeavoring to get the Government to give everyone $30 a week so they could spend it to increase business—a new idea.

In trying to find out what it was all about and to learn about the development of our currency system I commenced to collect paper money. I knew something about the Colonial and Continental bills, but knew nothing about the bank money, which was the principal paper currency from 1790 to 1866, when it was suppressed by Congress, after Congress had passed the legal-tender act and established the National Banking System. When these acts were passed, the idea was that the legal-tender notes would be retired when specie payments were resumed, also the national banks were chartered with the same idea, all being chartered for a period of twenty years. The Government started to redeem the legal-tenders that had been issued to the amount of $500,000,000 until they had been reduced below $400,000,00 outstanding, when an agitation was started to stop the retirement of the legal-tender notes. In addition, Congress passed an act that no more legal-tender notes should be retired. They are still in circulation, but are almost lost among the large volume of silver certificates and Federal Reserve notes now in circulation, and the present Administration has suppressed the national bank notes.

It is very difficult for people or collectors to understand it who have not made a study of the currency in use before 1862. The only real money in the United States prior to that time were coins of silver and gold and large copper cents, which were paid out in redemption of the notes issued by the State chartered banks, in the case of a heavy run for the redemption of their notes, as the laws of the different States under which they had been chartered required them to redeem notes in legal-tender coins.

Before 1820 all corporations considered it as a right to issue their bills in any amount in denominations convenient for current money, and before 1866 all States chartered banks with the right to issue their notes and place them in circulation as money. No one had to take the money of the State chartered banks in payment of a debt; that is, it had no legal-tender quality, but was denominated as current money. Generally the notes of the Bank of North America, the Philadelphia Bank and a dozen other banks of Philadelphia were accepted without question in Philadelphia; but if you had a note for $10 of the Tradesmen's Bank of New Orleans in 1859 (it being a new bank), the note would not have been taken because the bank's credit was not known or established. Also, the counterfeiters were very successful in passing their false creations so that every merchant had to have a counterfeit detector to see if the note had been counterfeited, so the common man was usually the victim. These notes often passed for a considerable time before it was discovered they were counterfeits. Bicknell's Counterfeit Detector was issued twice a month, at $1.50 a year. There were counterfeits on practically all notes that had good credit standing, in denominations up to $1,000. Some of them were even taken by the banks to considerable amounts before they were discovered to be counterfeits. Many that were left in the hands of people are still found as heirlooms that have been held for several generations, and the ones who find them in books and other out-of-the-way places think they ought to be worth a lot. Most of the best detectors listed about 2,000 counterfeits every issue, but when the bank was closed or failed they were no longer listed, because then the notes of that bank failed to pass, no one accepting them. For that reason, the great annoyance of the various counterfeits, and trouble caused by notes of some locations only circulating at a discount—in fact most of them when they were too far from home—90 per cent. of the population were opposed to paper money, commonly called bank money, one hundred years ago, until after the Civil War, when the bank money was no longer in use. Then the people found the greenbacks good everywhere, and the people became paper-money conscious, so that when they found that the greenbacks were being redeemed and retired there was started a greenback party, headed by Benjamin F. Butler, who had been an officer in the Union Army, and Congress passed the law that no more should be retired, or taken out of circulation, but collectors are retiring quite a number from circulation.

And so we have paper money, thank you.

Counterfeit Decorations And Coins

By THEODOR HENTGEN
The Bronx, New York

Honor among counterfeiters, forgers and thieves is absent. Nothing is immune from their devilish and impious art. The history of coinage involves some history of counterfeits as well. Only lately we read in the European press about the discovery of a counterfeit ring of international scope whose intentions were to flood the market with decorations of a fictitious order by the name of Order of St. George of Bourgoigne. The fake order was sold for from 5,000 to 7,000 francs. The decoration is a plain Maltese cross with some sort of ribbon to placate the victim. From the earliest dates of coins men have been found to imitate them in inferior metals for purposes of gain. Even among the earliest coins counterfeits are found. It is found in the old history books that Polycrates purchased the departure of the Lacedemonians from Samos by striking off a large number of pieces of lead cased with gold, like the coin of the country, and paying these to the unwary soldiers. There are extant specimens of forged gold coins of Lydia which may be specimens of the coins made by Polycrates. His style of conduct and his associates in Greece were of a similar class to those we now expect from counterfeiters and forgers of decorations. Before the advent of our real numismatist many collectors had been misled by forged coins which were not even imitations of the genuine. In Padua, about the sixteenth century, two engravers, Jean Cavino and Alexander Bassiano made coins and medals. They became so skillful that their copies could not be detected from originals and sold as genuine coins and medals. They are the origin of the name Paduan, applied by collectors to any ancient coin of modern make. One of the most industrious coiners was a man in Hamburg—Becker my name. He made many thousands of coins purely from imagination without any historical authority. Today you find some of the Becker coins in some collections. Of course a numismatist of standing would not offer the fakes for sale, but now and then one will drift past the horizon of the numismatic world. Experience is the only guide to detect counterfeits of ancient coins. In America, dangerous counterfeiting had been carried on for years, especially among the old and rare American pieces. The absence of a clear sound will soon detect those counterfeits. By examining the coin carefully, a mark around the coin's edge is the tell-tale, as most are electrotypes. These coins are filled with silver solder or with silver. Nearly all the rare American pieces are reproduced. Specimens are found in the market. All the reproductions have a rough appearance on the surface. They look like castings. Be on your guard against them.

FIFTH FAR WESTERN NUMISMATIC CONFERENCE.

The boys here in the Far West have been working hard so that the Fifth Far Western Numismatic Conference, May 19 to 21, would rank with the best regional numismatic gatherings. The coin exhibit, to be known as "Coins of the Seven Seas," is under the direction of Chairman Roy Hill and his committee. Due to successful financing, there will be no charge for exhibiting, but the committee reserves the right of limitation and rejection.

Ralph A. Mitchell, in his spare time president of the P. C. N. S., will attend to the hammer at the conference auction and promises some good lots. Round-table discussions will be sponsored by Richard A. Webb, Dr. Bruce Wallace and W. J. Van Rossem. The dinner to be held Saturday night is in the hands of R. V. Harris, and the speaker of the evening will be Weston Settlemyer, executive secretary of the Historical Coinings Society.

During numismatic hour on Sunday we will hear Dr. A. F. Pradeau, of Los Angeles, authority and writer on numismatic subjects pertaining to Mexico. He will be followed by Richard A. Webb, of San Francisco.

This and other features will take place at the conference and you can hardly afford to miss it. And don't forget we have a great fair out here on Treasure Island, in San Francisco Bay. Coming? Well I should hope to tell you.

HARVEY L. HANSEN, General Chairman.

PHILOSOPHY OF A COLLECTOR.

Divide your day so that you will derive the ultimate good out of life. Don't take business worries home with you at the close of the day. A man who thinks of his work at all hours gets no rest. Sleep relieves your tired limbs, but a hobby and change of interest is the only escape from the burden of your daily grind at the office, shop or profession. You can derive complete rest and relaxation only by having your mind occupied with thoughts different from those during your working hours. Promise yourself to follow these receipts. It is a poor man who cannot make a promise.

Coin collecting and the various side lines of numismatics makes one of the most interesting hobbies. It gives you poise hardly acquired in any other way. Take up the branch in the numismatic field best suited to your character and inclination. There are many side roads in the hobby of collecting coins, medals, decorations and paper money, and all of them lead to a great store of knowledge of the people and past history. The knowledge of classic literature which you derive from the hobby puts you in a class by yourself among your non-collecting friends whose minds are in a dormant state. In a short time your circle of interesting friends will have become greatly enlarged and you will be moving on a higher level of civilization.

VARIETIES OF THE PEACE DOLLAR.

It is well known that the design and dies for the Peace dollar, first coined in 1921, were prepared in a great hurry. The coins made from the first dies were not satisfactory, some parts of the design being in too high relief, and early in 1922 a new master die was prepared. Any collector comparing dollars of 1921 with those of later date will readily note the changes. It would be interesting to have information from actual specimens as to whether any dollars were minted in 1922 before the dies were changed. One way of easily detecting the two dies is by counting the number of sun rays which show between the tail of the eagle and the mountain top on which the eagle stands. The 1921 dollar shows eight such rays and the later design shows six.

Now another variety has appeared. Mr. Berghli, of San Diego, has found two die varieties in the dollar of 1935, San Francisco mint. One of these shows the usual six rays below the tail of the eagle, while the other shows seven rays. The lower ray also appears above the tail and points directly toward the mintmark S. So far this variety has not been found on the 1935 dollars of the Philadelphia mint, but these Philadelphia dollars are not plentiful on the Pacific Coast, and Eastern collectors have something for which to be on the lookout.

British West Africa—The coins of British West Africa dated 1938 bear the head of King George VI. The 2 shillings, shillings, and sixpence are struck in a brassy composition metal, and the threepence, penny and halfpenny are in nickel. There is a nickel penny also (not illustrated) of same design as the halfpenny. (Specimens from Gutttag Bros., New York City.)

EXHIBIT OF FRACTIONAL CURRENCY AT CORTLAND.

A very fine exhibit of fractional currency was made on April 15 at a special meeting of the Cortland Coin Club at Mr. Crofoot's home. Mr. Crofoot showed his collection, which is the old Cunningham collection, and contains a few unique items. Then the guest of honor, F. C. C. Boyd, showed his unbelievably complete collection, which contains many unique items. Fractional currency collectors who were not there missed the numismatic treat of a lifetime.

Vatican State—Sede Vacante issues of 1939, silver 5 and 10 lire. The Sede Vacante coins are always struck bearing this inscription between the death of one Pope and election of the next. On the shield the arms of the Papal Chamberlain are shown, which in this instance are those of Cardinal Pacelli, who was subsequently elected Pope and is now Pope Pius XII. This is one of the rare instances in Church history when the Papal Chamberlain has been elected Pope. The designs are by Mistruzzi, well-known Italian coin designer. This issue is already very much sought after by collectors and is bringing high premiums.

EXCAVATIONS ON THE SITE OF OLYNTHUS.

Following are some sidelights of the Baltimore Coin Club banquet at the Hotel Belvedere on March 16 by one present.

After a sumptuous repast, the master of ceremonies George Requard, secretary of the club, introduced the visitors present and then movies were shown of the A. N. A. convention at Columbus, 1938. But the outstanding feature of the evening was a lecture by Prof. David Moore Robinson, professor of archaeology at the Johns Hopkins University. The lecture was on the lost city of Olynthus, in Greece, discovered by Professor Robinson about 1928 and which has been in the process of excavation until the present time.

This city was destroyed by Philip of Macedon about 350 years B. C. The foundations of its buildings were of stone, upon which the superstructures, made of sun-dried brick with roofs of wood, were left a burned and crumbling mass by the torch of destroyers. Years went by and the abandoned city was gradually buried by the elements to a depth of six or more feet, and as time went on was forgotten and its site obliterated but not its name. A nation's history is brought down in its metal and the coins struck by Philip of Macedon recorded its history. The coins bearing the portrait head of Philip on one side and the symbol of Olynthus on the other were left to posterity.

The excavations were carried on under the watchful eyes of the Greek officials, but under Professor Robinson's supervision. Basket after basket of earth was removed and sifted for items of archeological interest. Many such items were brought to light, household utensils of terra cotta, vases, lamps of bronze and items used as means of adornment, etc. As the excavations proceeded it showed that the streets were laid out like the present day city blocks. Each block held five houses facing the street, and backing up against these five were five more facing the next street which ran parallel and so on. Each house was 60 feet square and there were shown the different rooms which Professor Robinson described, one containing the brazier where the cooking and the preparing of the meals was done. Another showed the bath, while others showed the sleeping quarters and the reclining benches where the inhabitants of the household reclined and ate their meals, as was the custom in those days, the food being placed on low tables adjacent to the benches.

Beautiful mosaics in the floors of some of the ruins were uncovered. These mosaics were made, not as we know mosaics of today by using colored marble or glass, but by using different colored pebbles taken from the beds of nearby streams. It will be noted that most all pebbles found in such streams have one side worn nearly flat. This was the side that was laid face up and it was really marvelous how the artisan used the pebbles arranged produced in color intricate designs, using the Greek scroll, and the swastika in the borders, outlining these mosaics, while the main portions portrayed designs to the fancy of the artist.

Many coins were unearthed, and after heavy rains in many places these coins could be picked up as one would pick up Indian arrow heads in walking over a newly plowed field in our own country. Approximately 400,000 coins have been recovered during the excavations, but Professor Robinson was not allowed to take anything out of the country. All he received for his unceasing labor was the honor. Professor Robinson has prepared numerous monographs on his excavations, and answered many questions asked him by those present.

The lecture was illustrated with maps and pictures showing the progress made, the streets, the sites of the houses and the mosaics which were photographed by building a scaffold some 15 or 20 feet high in order that the camera could be pointed down upon them.

Thus a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

FEDERAL EXHIBIT AT THE G. G. I. E.

Collectors visiting the Federal exhibit at the Golden Gate International Exposition may check up and order Government publications relating to coins. They are not on hand to take with you, but you can order them. One usually wouldn't do this at home, but such a chance to get them should be made use of.

The Federal exhibit also has on display samples of currency and other Government-made securities and documents, together with a press on which the currency is printed from steel engraved plates. Pictures of Presidents George Washington and Franklin D. Roosevelt were made during the demonstration.

WANTS INFORMATION ON PETER MAVERICK, ENGRAVER.

In connection with a check list of the engravings of Peter Maverick (1780-1831), I am anxious to include some listings of his bank-note engravings. These extended from about 1800 to his death. He worked alone, with Asher Durand, with Leney, with Rollinson, and at least once with C. C. Wright. In lettering he never was surpassed, though otherwise a second-rate engraver. This ability led him to much patronage because of the difficulty of counterfeiting his work, though Perkins' device of the lathe scroll work somewhat injured his clientele.

I shall be obliged if any fellow member of the A. N. A. would let me know of bank notes bearing his signature in any form, with the name and place of the bank, the denomination of the bill, its date (too often missing), and a brief reference to the character of the pictorial design. The inscription does not matter. I have found about 40, mostly in New York City and New Jersey, and would appreciate deeply any aid in extending this.

A FORTHCOMING LIST OF ADMIRAL VERNON MEDALS.

May I through your columns ask that any collectors of the series of medals connected with Admiral Edward Vernon will be so good as to send me their names and addresses?

A new and what is hoped will be an authoritative list of these medals has been compiled, but before proceeding with publication I am seeking the privilege of comparing specimens in other collections with a view to no known variety being omitted.

HISTORICAL COININGS SOCIETY.

More than a year ago there appeared on the San Francisco numismatic horizon a man with an idea and a mission. The man is Weston Settlemier, executive secretary of the Historical Coinings Society, and the idea follows.

Mr. Settlemier, who founded the society, had long had as a hobby the study of history and, while not a numismatist, came to the conclusion that coins would assist the school teachers in creating more interest among students in the study of history and also art. The purpose of the society is, therefore, to encourage anything that leads to a wider appreciation of the historical and art education acquired by a study of coinage. It stresses the value of the history associated with the coinage, and similarly it stresses the value of art, mythology and religious values associated with coinage.

The society does not attempt to specialize on the straight numismatic features of coinage, feeling that that field is the special province of the American Numismatic Association, the American Numismatic Society and similar organizations in foreign countries. It feels that these are the days of visual education. Teachers throughout the land are finding it easier to teach children if they show pictures or exhibits. In modern education as in advertising, "a picture is worth a thousand words" in driving home a difficult point easily.

As Mr. Settlemier says, "If little Willie thinks that history is a dry-as-dust subject, full of hard dates and dead men's quarrels, he quickly thinks differently when he sees a real sword, a real helmet, a real statue or a real coin of Caesar. He begins to understand that the problem of the ancients and the medieval people were fundamentally the same as our own people. He begins to think maybe history is real, even romantic and perhaps profitable. That is the point of the Society's work."

Primarily, the society is organized to loan historical coins or replicas in plaster of historical coins to the schools. Mr. Settlementier felt that many of the coins that he wanted were too expensive to obtain, so he enlisted the aid of Mr. John Allan, Keeper of Coins of the British Museum, in obtaining plaster replicas for the exhibit. The exhibit travels in a 40-tray coin cabinet and is so arranged that the coins and descriptions can be used to suit any educational need on the part of any individual teacher. A very happy reaction has already been had to the circulation of the first "travelling case of coins" or "March of Money" or "Coin Outline of History" which the Society has loaned to the public and private schools in San Francisco.

In these days, when numismatists are beginning to realize that the future of numismatics lies with the juniors Mr. Settlementier's theory that we can't take the American child to the British Museum or the American Numismatic Society's museum we will take those museums to them is most interesting and should prove most profitable a generation hence. The Society does not have a membership in the accepted sense, but has a general advisory committee, for which has been gathered a galaxy of important and influential names, all of whom feel that this is an outstanding venture. Mr. John Allan, Keeper of Coins of the British Museum, is chairman and Harvey L. Hansen has the great privilege of serving as vice-chairman. R. A. Webb, of San Francisco, also represents numismatics on the committee.

But the idea and the energy behind its accomplishment and continuation belongs to the hard-working executive secretary, Weston Settlementier. In time the Historical Coinings Society will derive an income from the profits of the world's first coinings album, which it is hoped soon to place under the sponsorships of banks or commercial businesses. This album, by the way, is twelve pages in extent and full of interesting reproductions and data. It should delight the mature numismatist as well as the novice, but I miss my guess if you won't hear about it nationally one of these days.

JUNIOR COIN COLLECTORS OF SAN FRANCISCO

The March meeting of the Junior Coin Collectors of San Francisco was postponed until March 31 in order to have it as a National Coin Week activity, at which time the members enjoyed a most interesting evening with coins of the Papal States in honor of the late Pope Pius XI and his successor, Pius XII. Wm. Kraft, former President of the P. C. N. S., displayed his very fine collection, which included coins from the fourteenth century to the 100-lire gold piece of 1929, and Orville Decker, an enthusiastic collector of these pieces but not generally known here yet, had his coins on view also. They explained many interesting facts about the coins and answered many questions. Guest speaker for the evening was Rev. Father Paul, of the Franciscan Fathers, who presented the highlights of Vatican history in a brief but impressive manner. He told of the beginnings of the Vatican in the naming of St. Peter as head of the Church as successor to Christ and then showed us how the Vatican gained territory and influence, how it came to issue coins, and what the present-day status means. He cited its 2,000 years of history with 1,200 years of coinages as a fascinating subject, which comprises one of the longest continuous series for collectors to study. He was much pleased with the display and did not think there was so much to be had in the way of Vatican coins.

The members brought coins of interest for their display board, and on it were a few Papal coins, 2, 3 and 4 pence Maundy money, G. G. I. E. tokens and some foreign coins.

Participation in National Coin Week was marked by having a special coin program at the California Collectors Club, Olympic Hotel, on March 24, with 4 frames on display. Displays were placed about the city by David Freed, president, in the San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan Association; Clifford Bloom, vice president, in the Citizens' Federal Savings and Loan Association; Warren Salz, former secretary, in the Wells Fargo Bank and Union Trust Co., Grant Ave. Branch; Roy Hill, at 2888 Mission street. New names have been added to the lists.

Many of the members are working on displays to enter in the Fifth Far Western Numismatic Conference coin exhibition, with a view to make the finest showing from Junior Coin Collectors to date. The May meeting will be postponed from May 19 to May 26 in order not to miss the last meeting of this semester and because of the conference opening on the 19th. Collectors visiting San Francisco are welcome to attend, in the San Francisco Museum of Art, War Memorial Civic Center, just across Van Ness Ave. from the City Hall, Friday, May 26th.

P. C. N. S. ELECTS FELLOWS.

At the March meeting of the Pacific Coast Numismatic Society the following were elected Fellows of the society:

Dr. A. Pradeau, of Los Angeles, for his volume on the "Numismatic History of Mexico" and previous publications, all of which gave evidence of exhaustive research.

David M. Bullowa, of New York, for his volume on the commemorative coins of the United States and for previous and numerous articles.

William L. Clark, of New York, for his book on coin collecting in the Boy Scout Merit Badge series and the research that made it possible.

Weston Settlemier of San Francisco, executive secretary of the Historical Coinings Society, for his work in connection with placing coin exhibits in the schools of California and for the research that such work entailed.

In the case of Messrs. Clark and Settlemier, the committee called attention to the fact that work for junior groups was particularly commendable.

Both Dr. Pradeau and Mr. Settlemier will speak during the Fifth Far Western Numismatic Conference in San Francisco, May 19-21.

COIN CLUB TO BE FORMED IN SOQUEL, CALIFORNIA.

Our Director of Advertising, Lewis M. Reagan, received a letter from a gentleman in Soquel, Cal., stating that a group was desirous of forming a coin club and asking what should be done in order to get membership in the A. N. A. Mr. Reagan sent the letter to me, and I immediately contacted the group. Then I asked Ralph A. Mitchell, who is president of the P. C. N. S. and travels considerably, to stop there and have a talk with them. They liked him, and to date the following four gentlemen have joined the A. N. A.: Dr. Karleen, Stanley E. Evans, William J. Finta and Albert H. Maxwell. They promise that there will be more members forthcoming and that a club will be formed in Soquel shortly.

Messrs: Sghia, Kortjohn and C. Wormser reported the progress of the Convention regarding plans for the program. The president asked that the Convention committee of the Club keep the members informed of the developments.

Mr. Bullowa reported the activities centering about Coin Week.

Mr. Bullowa outlined a plan which had been considered by several members of the club. The idea was to have the various members of the club correlate their work in the form of a project. The suggested project was colonial coins, and several members volunteered to write up certain phases of this series and present to the others at a future meeting a brief outline of the series. It was hoped that if the plan worked, the combined papers could be edited, and presented to the members as a yearbook, which would be an actual piece of work which the members had produced during the past year.

The President suggested that the members think over the plan, as there was sufficient time to determine the club's course in the next few meetings.

Mr. Clark spoke briefly, stating that he believed each member would gain more if he prepared a special paper on his own series. He did not think that members cared to branch out in the Colonial series who were already actively studying other series.

Mr. Stein appointed Mr. Van Vorst and Mr. Arthur to take charge of the Colonial series, and see to what extent its operation would be feasible, as a Club project.

The topics for the next meeting are: Coins from countries beginning with the letter V. Roman coins of Regalianus and Gallienus. U. S. dollars from 1836 to 1891. Decorations of the U. S.

Mr. Silverman and Mr. Hentgen reported the planned exhibits for Coin Week.

THE EVIL SIDE OF MONEY.

Intend here money's power to comprehend
And fix resulting evil by its end
Out of the way where money can be found
It means to tread upon forbidden ground,
Like the evil one in his forward play
Dost thou that dangerous spot survey.
It bends fortune's unperceived decay,
While ignorance gently slopes the way
In debtor's chains thy dignity was led
To the altar of despair, thy honor bled;
The lending pleasure sickens into pain,
Your supplication for relief in vain,
Could you ever desert that sacred post
In such unthankful baseness to be lost
As to make the lender more despised,
Where he deserved to be highly priced;
By all well-meant promises abide;
Honor once destroyed can never be supplied;
A felon's knowledge in the ways of vice
Finds at last that each man has his price.

THEOROR HENTGEN.

NEW NICKELS APPEAR IN QUANTITIES IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Supplies of the Jefferson 1938 nickel seem to have hit the banks in San Francisco lately, for they have suddenly become available again in ample numbers, though they may disappear soon. They do not get into general circulation as yet. People hoard them as fast as they come. R. H.

U. S. LARGE CENT COLLECTION U. S.

Are you one of the many collectors of Large Cents that want a set with all the dates in choice condition but can't afford to pay the high price that such a set would cost? Then here is your opportunity to buy a set that includes a Chain 1793, 1795 lettered edge, 1798 over '97, 1799-1804-1809-1823 perfect date and 1823 over '22, and 1828 large and small dates, also many others. 79 different coins altogether. This set would win no prize as to condition, but if you could use a collection that includes the above dates, and more, at a low price, then write at once. This collection catalogs for $250.00. My price $95.00

Satisfaction or your money refunded.
